Description/content Processes of (de-)globalisation pose ever new challenges to large corporate groups as well as small- and medium-sized enterprises. In the past, the focus was on issues such as fierce international competition, opening up new sales markets, and optimising global value chains. Today the focus is on the changing economic world order and its consequences for companies.

A qualification in international management is therefore more relevant than ever. With our degree programme, we will optimally prepare you for management roles and responsibilities in international companies. The focus is on corporate leadership and strategic management. You will also gain legal and economic knowledge that is vital in a globalised economy.

Course Details

Course organisation The International Management Master's programme is organised as follows: during your first semester, you will develop your business skills in the areas of human resources, marketing, and corporate governance with an international focus. You will also be familiarised with the relevant quantitative methods, international business law, and international economics. The second semester is devoted to expanding and solidifying your knowledge in risk, innovation, and strategic management. You will gain insight into the controllership of international companies. Furthermore, you will be fostering your social skills in the areas of leadership and communication as well as your entrepreneurial skills. In the third semester, cross-linking modules are offered: an extensive, computer-based business simulation game in which you co-lead an international high-tech company in a team, and the Master's thesis on an international management topic of your choice, often in cooperation with a company. Two elective modules in the second and third semesters allow you to set your own priorities.

The programme consists of lectures, seminars, practical elements, workshops, excursions, small-group discussions, and tutorials. The Department of Business maintains a significant number of lively ERASMUS+ partnerships with universities throughout Europe, and further collaborations with universities in the USA, Korea, Jordan, and Australia to name but a few. You have the opportunity to take advantage of this excellent network of partner universities for a complementary study abroad period. In some cases it is even possible to obtain a second degree in the context of your study abroad period in addition to the MSc degree in Fulda. The department also runs its own Internship Unit, which provides assistance in finding placements in Germany or abroad.

In order to graduate, students are required to pass all 13 mandatory modules plus the two elective courses, resulting in 90 ECTS overall. In the four-semester variant you are required to obtain an additional 30 ECTS, for instance through a six-month internship, a semester abroad or by taking additional modules.

A special preparatory programme is offered for potential applicants to the Master's programme in International Management. This course takes one semester and provides advanced preparation for students from abroad who want to "warm up" before starting their future studies in Fulda. It offers German and English language courses, preparatory courses on Principles of Management, Financial and Managerial Accounting, an introduction to the methods and techniques of academic work, and an introduction to the higher education system in Germany. Priority is assigned to Master's applicants. For more information regarding this pre-study course, please check: <https://www.hs-fulda.de/en/international/international-office/ways-to-fulda/study-preparation/pre-study-fulda>
