Description/content	The Graduate Programme for Transcultural Studies (GPTS) is a three-year doctoral programme within the interdisciplinary research environment of the Heidelberg Centre for Transcultural Studies (HCTS) at Heidelberg University. The GPTS combines the German model of highly individualised doctoral studies and a system of guided courses and workshops to support young scholars in all aspects of this stage of their academic careers. Doctoral students become part of a vibrant community of international scholars and are trained in transcultural theories, interdisciplinary approaches, and methods from the participating disciplines. These include anthropology, archaeology, art history, Chinese studies, history, Islamic studies, Japanese studies, literary studies, political science, religious studies, and South Asian Studies.

Course Details

Course organisation	The structured doctoral programme runs for a maximum of three years. While the second year is dedicated to the collection and analysis of relevant data, doctoral students have to attend a number of courses during the first and third years. These courses, in the form of seminars, reading classes, and colloquiums, are designed to familiarise them with the theoretically transcultural and methodologically interdisciplinary approach of the HCTS.

Additional workshops help doctoral students to plan and manage their research efficiently and express their results in fluent academic language.
 Apart from the mandatory courses, doctoral students are required to attend regular meetings and workshops at the HCTS. Where necessary or useful with regard to their research, they may attend other courses from the general curriculum of Heidelberg University (language courses, etc).

First programme year:

- Reading class on theories and methods of transcultural studies
- Colloquium with supervisors, senior researchers and peers
- Workshop "Time management for doctoral researchers"
- Workshop "Academic Writing in English"
- Internal evaluation

Second programme year:

- Data collection and analysis, e.g. field work and/or archival research
- Internal evaluation

Third programme year:

- Individual monitoring of writing process
- Colloquium with supervisors, senior researchers and peers
- Workshop "Academic Writing and Peer Reviewing"
- Workshop "Career Perspectives"

In addition, doctoral candidates are encouraged to present and discuss their work at national and international workshops and conferences.
