Description/content	The "Global Health" study programme at Fulda University of Applied Sciences is the first of its kind in Germany to offer the opportunity to complete undergraduate studies with a focus on global health challenges. In today's interconnected world, there is a growing demand for professionals equipped to navigate global health complexities. Our programme meets this need by providing students with a comprehensive education in health, social, and political sciences. With small class sizes and opportunities for international engagement, including a semester abroad and internships, students gain valuable insights and hands-on experience. With a focus on reducing health disparities and promoting health equity worldwide, the programme addresses the structural, political, social, economic, and environmental factors that shape patterns of health and illness across the globe. The multidisciplinary programme tackles the complexity of health through engagement with health systems, societal determinants of health, and planetary health as well as efforts to understand the power dynamics shaping global health inequities. Students learn to engage critically with many dimensions affecting global health, including the policies of governments and other actors, migration and population growth, disparities in wealth, and climate change. We offer online info sessions on a regular basis. Current dates can be found on the programme

Course Details

Course organisation	This is a full-time, on-campus study programme. The teaching language is English throughout the programme. Important to note is that the "Welcome Week" is mandatory and is part of one of the first semester modules. Therefore, to earn credits for this module, students must attend at least 80% of the "Welcome Week". The Welcome Week is scheduled to take place in the second week of April. Students will receive all necessary information upon admission. Analysing challenges, structures, and strategies in global health is at the centre of the study programme. The broad scope of the course includes subjects such as the global burden of disease, health systems in the global context, planetary health, and global health policy architecture. During the fourth semester, there is an arranged period for studying abroad. In semesters five and six, all students participate in a study project that spans both semesters, providing an opportunity to apply their knowledge to practice. All students complete an internship of 480 hours (= three months) in the seventh semester.

Saskia Jaenecke & Kolahta Asres Ioab BSc Global Health

Our experiences at Fulda University of Applied Sciences have been very positive so far! The degree aims to address health challenges on a global scale, and it does this by looking into a broad range of topics relating to health from both national and international perspectives. The university lecturers and staff were supportive from the moment we applied, and the interactive learning environment helps to keep everyone engaged!

University location

A historic city founded in 744, Fulda today has a population of 70,000 with approx. 100,000 people living in the region. Fulda's Baroque quarter is one of the most beautiful in Germany and attracts visitors from all over the world. The picturesque Old Town has many cafés, bars, and pubs, with numerous shops and boutiques. The city's cultural life has something to offer for everyone. The high quality of life makes Fulda a great place to live and an ideal place to study. Fulda enjoys ideal public transport connections. One of Europe's principal international airports, Frankfurt International, is just one hour away by car or direct train. Other major cities in Germany, like Berlin, Munich, Cologne, or Hamburg, are within easy reach and only two to three hours away by train. Even famous European capitals like Paris and Brussels are reachable within five hours by train.
