I teach German at the state university in my hometown in Russia. The didactics seminar offered me the opportunity to refresh my knowledge and share experiences with other German teachers. One of the topics that I found the most interesting was the "adaptation of literary texts for classroom use". I will take a lot of enthusiasm as well as many new ideas home with me to use in my future work as a German teacher. I can totally recommend this fun seminar!

— FH Aachen University of Applied Sciences —

About 15,000 students are currently studying at FH Aachen, which offers more than 100 Bachelor's and Master's degree courses in the fields of engineering, economics, and design. FH Aachen cooperates with many international partner universities and furthermore maintains relationships with a wide range of well-reputed companies in order to allow students to get in touch with possible professional fields.

University location

The European city of Aachen is located in western Germany and borders Belgium and the Netherlands. The French border is also not far away.

Apart from being an attractive location for academic institutions (four universities) and companies, Aachen also offers a wide range of sights; the picturesque Old Town and the Cathedral, the "Elisenbrunnen" with its hot springs, the old city gates, many charming buildings, and historic as well as modern museums make a stay in Aachen a unique European experience!
