I signed up for the course in Technical German for Medicine to improve my specialist language skills as well as to gain insights into the German healthcare system and the work of German doctors. The course was very interesting, and I learned a lot of new things. The expectations I had for the course were even exceeded. I would definitely recommend it to other students!

— FH Aachen University of Applied Sciences —

More than 15,000 students are currently studying at FH Aachen, which offers more than 100 Bachelor's and Master's degree courses in the fields of engineering, economics, and design. FH Aachen cooperates with many international partner universities and furthermore maintains relationships with a wide range of well-reputed companies in order to allow students to get in touch with possible professional fields.

University location

The European city of Aachen is located in western Germany and borders Belgium and the Netherlands. The French border is also not far away. Apart from being an attractive location for academic institutions (four universities) and companies, Aachen also offers a wide range of sights; the picturesque Old Town and the Cathedral, the "Elisenbrunnen" with its hot springs, the old city gates, many charming buildings, and historic as well as modern museums make a stay in Aachen a unique European experience!
