Course Details

Course organisation

The programme comprises four semesters. If the subject area focuses on a single Romance language, there are two obligatory modules in linguistics (Romance languages: language structure, variation, and change) and literature (Romance literatures: constants and dynamics). If the subject area focuses on linguistics or literature, there are two obligatory modules for both languages. Two modules include an independent study unit.

The elective modules comprise regional studies, other Romance languages such as Romanian or Catalan, Romance gender studies, communication and media studies as well as further Romance disciplines and language courses for academic and professional purposes.

Towards the end of the programme, the students attend research colloquiums in either of their subject areas. In the Master's thesis, they apply the acquired subject-related, methodological and theoretical competencies by investigating on a linguistic or literary topic.

The double degree programme with the Université de Pau et des Pays de l'Adour comprises four semesters, two of which are spent at the partner university. The German students spend the first academic year at the Université de Pau, and the French students spend the second academic year at the University of Göttingen.

At the Université de Pau, the contents of the programme include French language courses as well as courses on literature, visual arts, regional studies, investigation methods, comparative literature and professional training. At the University of Göttingen, there are two obligatory modules in linguistics and literature, and there are elective modules in French regional studies, other Romance languages such as Romanian or Catalan, Romance gender studies, communication and media studies as well as further Romance disciplines such as Italian, Portuguese or Spanish Studies.
