Target group	ISU Kassel invites motivated and qualified students or graduates to join the programme. Students who would like to focus their studies on wind energy will most likely find the ISU programme particularly interesting.
Description/content	There has never been as much wind power as today. This is one reason why manufacturers, service providers, and evaluators require highly qualified employees with specific skills in wind energy. The University of Kassel and the Fraunhofer Institute for Energy Economics and Energy System Technology (IEE) registered this development several years ago. Therefore, these two partners established an advanced study programme – Wind Energy Systems Online (wes.online). The on-campus summer university course "Engineering Science of Wind Energy Systems – Fundamentals, Technology and Practical Investigations" is a part of the above-mentioned Master's programme. It introduces the main aspects of the technology and operation of wind turbines and wind farms. Furthermore, fundamentals of mechanical and electrical engineering are included. This fundamental knowledge is enhanced by laboratory studies at the University of Kassel and Fraunhofer IEE and excursions to wind farms, wind industry and wind research institutes. In addition to the academic seminars in the respective disciplines, all students attend intensive German language courses. These courses are offered at three different levels (from beginning to advanced). Participants will have plenty of opportunities to practise their language skills while staying with a host family.
