Description/content	This course will give an overview of how global governance works in a world of networks, diluted power, fragmented organisational structures, renewed great power competition, and exceeded planetary boundaries. The focus will be on the actors, institutions, and ideas of world politics today – from the United Nations (UN) family and Agenda 2030 to "Great Powers" to thematic alliances such as the OECD (Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development). Some hope Germany will take on the mantle of "leader of the free world". While it is true that Germany has entered a phase of new responsibility in its foreign policy and remains strongly committed to the liberal order and global sustainability, it is becoming more and more difficult for such powers to project their influence into the global order. The course will take this German perspective as a starting point to try to understand the state of global governance more broadly. Which nations are the indispensable nations? Who are the spoilers? What kind of cooperation is needed to save the planet? Whose "Global Order" is it? How can we save the world? We will look at multilateralist and unilateralist behaviours of states and also at recent efforts to bring more sustainability to global governance. We will also identify non-Western visions of global governance. Finally, the course will revolve around the question of how to make the global liberal institutionalist order (and ultimately, our planet) more resilient in the face of new authoritarian challenges – after all, this is what Germany and other countries like it are striving to do.
