Description/content	Please also visit the FUBiS free digital lecture series, which offers a broad overview of the programme's academic course offerings: http://www.fubis.org/2_prog/online/index.html About this course Leadership surrounds us always and everywhere. Be it as a supervisor, team captain, student activist, or parent – we all need certain leadership skills to thrive in our private and professional lives. However, what makes a good leader has long been the subject of controversial debate in research and practice. Leadership theories have constantly evolved, and modern concepts are manifold. At the same time, management scandals (e.g. Wirecard, Dieselgate, Twitter) repeatedly bring leadership failures to light. This course introduces a basic understanding of what leadership actually is and how that understanding depends on time and context. On this basis, we will take a closer look at what enables individuals to lead in an entrepreneurial way and why an entrepreneurial mindset is more important than ever among today's leaders. The economic, political, and ecological crises around the world have led us to question many of the assumptions on what entrepreneurship and "typical" entrepreneurs are. Various initiatives have been established to promote diverse forms, purposes, and initiators of entrepreneurial activity. Behind such endeavours lies the hope that entrepreneurship will not only create new jobs but also generate new ideas for the future and provide solutions to the world's most pressing problems. Accordingly, the European Commission developed a reference framework (EntreComp) to establish an understanding of entrepreneurship as a competence that results in social, cultural, or financial value for others. The basic idea of this framework is that the necessary skills and attitudes can be learned and applied by anyone.
